

KEARNEY BIO

Chris is a public policy and governmental affairs professional with over 30 years of government and private industry experience in the energy, environment and natural resource arenas, having held senior positions in the executive branch, the US Senate and House, and the energy sector. His policy areas of expertise include, but are not limited to, oil and gas, public lands related matters, NEPA, the Endangered Species Act, conservation, and the federal budget.

Drawn from his many years of service on both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue, Chris possesses a deep and broad knowledge of the federal legislative process, the importance of the state and local -federal relationship, and a thorough understanding of executive branch policy and regulatory development -- with a particular focus on the Departments of Interior, Energy, Agriculture, the Council on Environmental Quality, and the Office of Management and Budget.

Chris maintains a network of contacts across Capitol Hill, the administration, organizations that do business with the federal government, and key business sectors across the nation, including oil and gas, public and private electric utilities, as well as conservation and natural resources.
